Submitted by Rory Lattimer Thu, 2012-04-19 00:00

Ocean Network Canada's Kim Juniper ^[2] and Verena Tunnicliffe share their experiences studying the Endeavour hydrothermal vents in the April 19th Vancouver Sun article One of Earth's Most Remarkable Places.

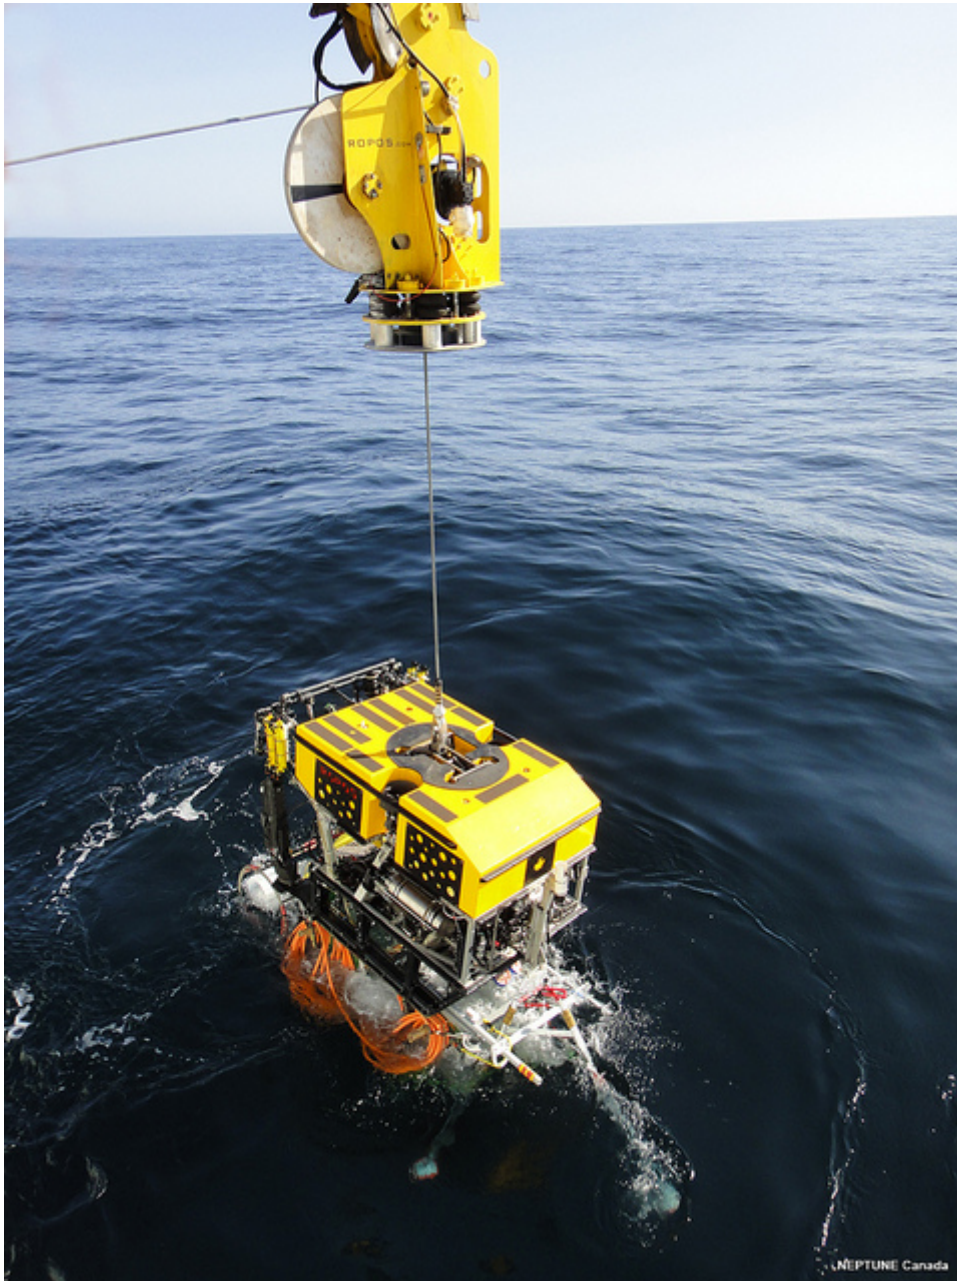

This story is the fifth of a six part special series on the "Health of the Ocean." The paper's online publication has also compiled a photo gallery ^[3] of this unique ecosystem located 250 km off Vancouver Island and over two km below the ocean's surface.

Many of these images have been captured during NEPTUNE's semi-annual maintenance cruises by the deep sea remotely operated vehicles such as ROPOS, owned and operated by the Canadian Scientific Submersible Facility (CSSF).
